

South African Telecommunications Ad Spend Report

The past two years following the rise of the pandemic have wreaked havoc in the lives and businesses of South Africans. As was said by President Cyril Ramaphosa in the 22 March nation address, "The pandemic has changed the way we work, travel, worship and socialise." With this change came a sudden increase in the need for connectivity as working and schooling from home became the new normal. One could assume this gave telecommunication companies an upper hand nonetheless they were also widely affected.
