

Brush up on Internet law

A six-week training course, Internet Law for Marketers and Business Owners, will be presented by Andrew Allison, CFO of Quirk Education. It will cover how companies can sell and market their products online.

It will cover the rules and regulations of South African law on online business and the following topics in detail:

- Understanding the basic legal framework South Africa works in
- Information and privacy
- Intellectual property, censorship and freedom of expression
- Conducting business online
- Current legal debates and a summary

Allison has six years of practicing law and a Master's Degree in income tax law. Registration closes Monday, 13 June 2011. Go to www.quirk.biz/courses for more details.
