

Apple taking on the movie industry

The next revolution, according to iPod-maker Apple, will be televised, writes the Mail & Guardian Online. Earlier this week, Apple revealed its plans to sell full-length feature films over the Internet for home TV viewing, as well as a device provisionally called iTV for transmitting video from a computer to a living-room television screen. For more, click here.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>